this book presents a multi layered analysis of the situation in central europe after the collapse of the austro hungarian empire the new geopolitics emerging from the versailles order and at the same time ongoing fights for borders considerable war damage social and economic problems and replacement of administrative staff as well as leaders all contributed to the fact that unlike western europe central europe faced challenges and dilemmas on an unprecedented scale the editors of this book have invited authors from over a dozen academic institutions to answer the question of to what extent the solutions applied in the habsburg monarchy were still practiced in the newly created nation states and to what extent these new political organisms went their own ways it offers a closer look at central europe with its multiple problems typical of that region after 1918 organizing the post imperial space a new political discourse and attempts to create new national memories the role of national minorities solving social problems and verbal and physical violence expressed in public space particular chapters concern post 1918 central europe on the local state and international levels providing a comprehensive view of this sub region between 1918 and 1923 the first book length analysis of how the bolsheviks responded to antisemitism during the russian revolution ethnicizing europe focuses on the dynamics of interethnic violence in europe between the two world wars the new international system that was enshrined by the versailles peace treaties after world war i did not bring stability to east central europe rather it resulted in a host of conditions like self determination international oversight revolutionary political ideas and democratic processes which eventually gave new meaning to already established conflicts as well as igniting new conflicts in the region this book opens with a discussion of the theoretical scholarship on ethnicity before proceeding to specific case studies investigating the different ways in which ethnicity was enacted and contested during a period of european transformation focusing mostly on ethnically heterogeneous locales rather than concentrating on either political violence or ethnonationalism this collection brings these two literatures together to show how ethnicization the legal concepts of citizenship and violence were intertwined in post versailles europe not only shaping the period between the wars but also the europe we know today the book concludes with an afterword by tara zahra which expands this perspective to the wider transatlantic region publication of this title is made possible with support from the vienna wiesenthal institute for holocaust studies the ukrainian pogroms of 1919 constitute a striking exhibition of mass savagery approximately 120 000 men women and children were killed whole villages were wiped out the entire jewish population of southern russia was reduced to the brink of complete destruction but dr heifetz is not content merely to set down a tale of horrors he seeks to analyze the social and psychological factors which lie behind this explosion of wholesale murder he discovers three separate sets of motives which hold good for the three classes of pogroms those committed by denikin those committed by petlura and those committed by the ukrainian guerilla leaders the political viewpoint of general denikin widely hailed in western europe and america as a champion of democracy against bolshevik tyranny was very simple he believed that all the troubles of russia should be ascribed to the overthrow of the tsar which in his opinion was brought about by the intrigues of jews and professional revolutionists his remedy was correspondingly simple kill off as many jews and revolutionists as possible then the peasants would gladly surrender their land the workers would hasten to give up their factories all classes again be well with holy russia something miscarried in denikin's calculations for the red army routed his cossacks near orel and his defeat was completed by tumultuary uprisings of the ukrainian peasants in his rear but before he was obliged to seek a hospitable refuge in england he enjoyed the satisfaction of killing about 50 000 jews dr heifetz adduces many eye witness reports of pogroms committed by denikin's troops together with specimens of the violently anti semitic literature distributed by order of his propaganda department the case of the ukrainian nationalist leader petlura is somewhat different petlura claimed to be a socialist and he can scarcely have regarded pogroms as a necessary part of his political and economic policy but he was unable to resist the temptation to make political capital by denouncing the jews at moscow and to attract the ruffianly elements to his side by offering prospects of unlimited looting the protestations of petlura's apologists that he actively opposed anti jewish outrages are effectively invalidated by the number of massacres unquestionably committed by his troops by his appointment of a notorious organizer of pogroms colonel petrov to the post of minister of war and by the fact that he was present at a pogrom in zhitomir without making any effort to stop it such bandit leaders as makhno and grigoriev may be considered in a very crude and direct sense representatives of the economic desires and interests of the ukrainian peasants these peasants were very good bolsheviks so far as driving out the landlords was concerned but having gained possession of the land they resented and opposed the existence of any strong central government whether communist or monarchist what they wanted was complete freedom of their manufactured goods and incidentally to murder the jews of all the contending factions the soviet government alone consistently and vigorously repressed every anti jewish manifestation in the territory under its control dr heifetz gives many instances of the humanity and discipline of the red troops whenever the soviet forces were compelled to retreat even the jewish bourgeoisie fled with them for protection
